BASE SCHEME OF GAMBLERS.

GRAND FORKS, N. He says that on April 14 he held a conversation with Nelson and also with Charles Ramsey in East Grand Forks. Ramsey stated that Nelson had been playing poker with Shaw and Dahl, and told affiant to keep quiet because he had a straight tip for some of the money. Ramsey suggested that the affiant ask Nelson for money and urged him to push the scheme of black-mail. After this conversation McNabb told Nelson he understood he had been playing poker and losing considerable of the bank's funds and that besides he had spent money in buying wine in houses of ill repute. He told Nelson the only way he could square himself would be to pay pay the money McNabb would have to "peach." To this Nelson replied. "You are mistaken. I have only played poker twice." Affiiant replied that he knew Nelson played often, and that he would have to have the money or he would make the matter public. Nelson said he would meet McNabb at 9 o'clock the following evening. McNabb asked him how much money he thought he could give him, and said that when he saw McNabb he would fix the matter up satisfactorily. After this interview McNabb became frightened at his attempted black-mail and dropped the matter, not attempting to see Nelson again.

HEMMED IN BY AN ICE FLOE

Thrilling Experience of the Steamer Caprivi While Crossing the Atlantic.

Thirty-Eight Hours Amid Icebergs That Towered Above the Masts - Warning Against Attempting the Northern Route.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., April 22.- A thrilling tale of a vessel being hemmed in by an ice floe in the north Atlantic was learned upon the arrival at this port to-day of the new steamship Caprivi, Captain McNabb, from! Shields. The Caprivi became wedged between ice fields April 11, at night, and remained fast for thirty-eight hours in a perilous position, with her crew rendered almost senseless from the cold, which froze even the spirit compasses. Hourly her position grew more alarming, and there seemed at one time to be little hope but that the vessel would be ground to atoms in the powerful ice formation. Captain McNabb says it was the most perilous passage he ever made.

great Iron and Steel Association of Bochum. At 10 o'clock on the night of April 11, the second officer had the deck and was pacing the bridge to and fro, to keep warm, when he suddenly beheld something white ahead. Before the engines could be stopped and reversed the ship crashed into an ice floe and worked herself well in before she stopped. The noise made by the thumping of the Caprivi coming in contact with the ice soon brought all hands on deck, and when their position was made known there was great confusion among the crew. As the night was impenetrably dark, it was not known which course to steer to get clear of the floe, and, after hours of hard work trying to free the ship, it was given up for the night.

When Tuesday morning broke, it was for the first time realized by all hands that their vessel was completely shut in by ice. She was separated as far as the eye could detect from the ocean and thousands of iceing" at Monte Carlo, is reported to have | bergs, towering high over the mustheads, studded the ocean. The engines were started "balf speed" and the ship plowed slowly through the ice. The work was tedious and extremely dangerous. It was not known what moment the bows would be burst in and all hands perish. The work was kept up, however, and at noon Wednesday the ship was in clear water, but was much disabled.

The hydrographers at this port have telegraphed Captain McNabb's experience to Washington, with a view of warning vessels of the dangers attending a north passage across the Atlantic at this season of the year. Reports show that the ice floe is rapidly working its way south.

They are about four miles out and fast in the ice. The City of London cleared yes-terday afternoon for Buffalo with flour. About three miles out she became locked in the ice. Two more steamers were sighted at 11 o'lock this morning, just entering the ice.

LIKE THE MUSGROVE CASE.

Attempt to Defraud Life Insurance Companies with the Aid of a Stolen Corpse.

SEATTLE, Wash., April 22.-Last week the house of William Radloff, a wealthy rancher near Seattle, was burned, and in the ruins was found a corpse, supposed to be that of Radloff, as he was missing. Radloff carried $55,000 of life insurance in his wife's favor. It was suspected for a time that Mrs. Radloff and one of the farm hands conspired to murder Radloff and get the insurance. To-day, however, suspicion is strong that Radloff robbed a grave, took a corpse to his house and placed it in the ruins for the purpose of leading the insurance companies to believe that he perished in the fire. Detectives are working on the case, and expect to soon arrest Radioff.

LATER-The inquest on the human remains found in the ruins of Radloff's house was held this afternoon. The testimony showed they were those of R. B. Lewin, who was supposed to have been buried in Greenwood Cemetery, Feb. 18. It also confirmed the story of a conspiracy to defraud the life insurance companies by making it appear that Radioff was burned to death. Louis Kostrouch, one of the conspirators who has confessed, told how Radloff and wife had agreed to the plot. He and Radloff stole a body from the ceme-tery last March and buried it in Radloff's chicken-yard. Then Radloff insured his life last Friday. They piled dry bark on the mattress in the house, saturated it with coal oil, and dressed the body in Radioff's clothes. Radloff crushed the skull and cut off the legs to create the appearance of murder. Then they lighted a candle with a waxed string running to a pile of shavings on the floor, and left the house, Kostrouch, coming to Seattle and Radloff going to Ballard, a suburb. Mrs. Radloff was dressed in mourning today, and testified she believed her husband dead. She got him to insure his life because a fortune-teller told her he would die in a year. She was preparing to go to Germany when the fire occurred. A mass of testimony was given showing that the corpse was that of Lewin and was stolen by Radloff. The jury found accordingly. Kostrouch and Mrs. Radloff were held on the charge of arson.

MAY BE A DUEL AFTER ALL.

Millbank and Fox, of Drayton-Borrowe-Scandal Notoriety, Gone to France.

NEW YORK, April 22.-A dispatch from London to the Evening World indicates that blood is at last to flow in the celebrated Drayton-Borrowe case. It is stated that Borrowe and Millbank vanished from London early this morning, and that Fox has also disappeared. It is believed that all have gone to France, where Borrowe and Fox will meet at daylight to-morrow. The latest phase of this dawdling affair seems to have real guns in it. The affair has been arranged with great secrecy, but the report here is that the duel will take place to-morrow morning, probably with pistols. Fox has all along held stanchly to his assertion that Borrowe knew of the publication of the letters in the Borrowe-Drayton affair, and authorized it. Borrowe denied this, asserting that while he tentatively agreed to the publication of the correspondence when the proper time arrived, he had no knowledge whatever that Fox had bargained to it for money or that it was to be published while Drayton was in mid-ocean, unable to defend himself. Last Tuesday Milbank met Fox by accident and the duel is believed to be the outcome of conversation on that occasion. The fact of the matter is both Fox and Borrowe are much mortified at the position in which they have placed themselves. While Fox has practically no social position here, his friends have made him keenly their disapprobation of his conduct in selling correspondence intrusted to him in an affair of honor, even though he did it, as he alleges, with Borrowe's consent. Borrowe, on the other hand, makes no secret of the fact that nearly all his friends in New York have cut him because Fox insists on making him an accomplice in the publication of Mrs. Drayton's disgrance.

ANOTHER INCENDIARY CAUGHT.

Confession of a Member of a Gang That May Have Operated in Indianapolis.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. CHICAGO, April 22.-Another arrest was made to-day in the Hania-Tiffin arson case. The prisoner is John Barr. The develop ments to-day were of the most sensational character. Miss Minnie Tiffin made a full confession, in which she detailed the operations of the gang. Mrs. Hania appeared in Justice Lyon's court, and was held for further examination in bond of $8,000. The two women are now in the county jail.

The police are confident that a widespread conspiracy to commit arson has been unearthed. All day long the wires were kept hot with messages flying to Inspector Marsh from various cities where fires similar to those Mrs. Hania is alleged to have started were received. Inquiries from Philadelphia, Cincinnati, Boston, St. Louis, Indianapolis and San Francisco were received, asking for full information. It is supposed that they have been operating in those cities. Two of Inspector Byrnes's men, from New York, are in the city and taking a deep interest in the case.

Democratic Religious Convictions.

To the Editor of the Indianapolis Journal: In commenting on the subdued tone and lack of enthusiasm in the Democratic convention yesterday you seem to have overlooked the fact of the deep religious convictions of the Democratic party. You will remember, however, that out of deference to that feeling the State committee postponed the meeting of the convention from the 14th to the 21st of the month in order that lenten meditations of the rank and file of the party might not be disturbed by the vanities and unrighteous things of politics, and must see now the unkindness of your remark that the date was changed to escape the comments of wicked Republican papers about the party's holding a convention on the anniversary of the great crime of one of its ad-

Religious? Well, we should say so. St. Grover, of course, is the embodiment of virtue and piety, and unselfish to the thirty-third degree; and wisef why, wis-dom will die with St. Grover unless Brother Holliday and his able lieutenant, who so generously espoused the cause of monopolistic capital in the late street railway troubles can manage, by long sentences and heavy (perhaps it should be written "heavey") phrases, to keep her alive a little while after their patron is gone. Still, I suppose, we should hope, even against the hope of St. Grover and his worshipers. There is, there must be, piety equal to Grover's, and wisdom to morethan match his, characters much more symmetrical; men whose early history doesn't have to be veiled lest it mar the beauty of that more recent.

In fact, come to think of it, there is a man in Washington now who beat St. Grover in the presidential race four years ago, come November, who can think more in a minute than Grover ever thought in his life; whose utterances, while less heavy, are much more weighty; who has a military and civil record that we can go back over, step by step, uncover from beginning to end, without finding anything to be ashamed of, and it seems the Republican party is going to be just wicked enough to renominate and re-elect him to preside over national affairs another term. We must admit, however, that it was a religious sentiment that caused the Democrats to postpone the meeting of their convention. Why, if they had met last week, they would have draped the flags and other emblems in mourning and turned all the pictures to the wall. INDIANAPOLIS, April 22.
